Thank you for your steady leadership and dedication to serve God's children, as together we make a path through the unknown, keeping our lamps raised to shine the light of Jesus through the dark and the murky. I pray that the mighty Spirit of our Lord continues to witness to your spirits, bringing forth daily the fruits of peace and joy that confound the world. I also join you in praying that we might see a supernatural revival in our lifetime, as Jesus calls His church to rise.

Thank you for taking the time to read this message that I have been compelled to share. God has placed a burden on my heart to stand against all forms of bondage and injustice, and my spirit is unsettled by what I see and know. As the current Coronavirus pandemic situation evolves, and as truths and proposed solutions slowly emerge, I would like to bring to light some possibilities that the church must be prepared to address.

It is a fact that the government is a primary creator of the patterns of this world. It is also apparent in the proven erosion of Christian values in the US that our government is not following God, and is evidently corruptible. As we are called to not conform to the patterns of this world, it would be irresponsible for us to simply cooperate with, or even condone, the instructions of this government without rigorously applying Godly discernment. We, who have been freed from the bondage of the fear of death, must continually be watchful for the work of the great deceiver. Our call is to place spiritual health first, therefore, we must apply utmost scrutiny to any imposed policy that restricts our ability to carry out the work to which God has called us, lest we become complicit in the application of practices that favor physical health above all, and prioritize some lives over others. Church leaders must apply the same "abundance of caution" in the protection of citizens' spiritual health that governments are applying to physical health.

In these current times, fear of sickness and death, as well as the extreme measures taken to mitigate them, have clearly become the pattern of this world. Followers of Christ must exercise spiritual wisdom in discerning to what degree we are to conform to this pattern. We are not called to prevent death, or even to mitigate physical illness, but to share the good news of everlasting life. Currently, hospitals nationwide have locked their doors to all visitors – families and ministers – in favor of allowing the afflicted to die alone in isolation. This is a grave injustice, and my heart breaks with the thought that the enemy is harvesting souls from these dark, isolated hospital rooms as patients die in a state of depression, hopelessness, and complete abandonment, with no one coming to feed them the bread of life that their souls so desperately long for in their final days and hours. But I know that God's love and mercy can extend beyond the physical life, so I still remain hopeful, even in grieving.

God calls us to love with a sacrificial love - to love others as ourselves. If government policies infringe on our ability to heed God's command – His greatest command – will we stand against it? Will we stand firm to fight the good fight of faith?

One very troubling emergent narrative in the US is that citizens will continue to be denied many of our foundational freedoms until a mass vaccination program is implemented. A great number of dedicated followers of Jesus hold valid Biblical objections to vaccination. Every vaccine causes injury, and they do sometimes cause death. Several vaccines in use, as well as several of those being developed for Coronavirus, are produced with the use of aborted fetal tissue. Proverbs 6:16-19 tells us that God detests a lying tongue and the shedding of innocent blood. Both of these offenses are a continual presence in the vaccine industry.

After three centuries of the systematic medicalization of health care, the common people have become subjugated to the imperious pharmaceutical and medical establishment. We are now experiencing massive spiritually and physically detrimental effects of a society that has shifted from a dependence on God to a dependence on doctors and pharmaceutical products.

There is also a growing trend for state and local governments to introduce policies that would require churches to record attendance for all gatherings, and to turn over these attendance records, including personal details, to government agencies upon request. Should this become the legal policy, many people may choose to avoid church for fear of government intrusion into their lives. This blatant intrusion into our places of worship is deeply troubling and wholly unacceptable. It seems as though we are at the top of a slippery slope, and we must resist any descent.

CS Lewis exhibited great wisdom in his sensitivity to this very type of government action, stating, "Of all tyrannies, a tyranny sincerely exercised for the good of its victims may be the most oppressive. It would be better to live under robber barons than under omnipotent moral busybodies. The robber baron's cruelty may sometimes sleep, his cupidity may at some point be satiated; but those who torment us for our own good will torment us without end for they do so with the approval of their own conscience."

Mandatory medicine is in direct opposition to the God-given role of parents to direct the health, education, and discipline of their children. Parents are supernaturally equipped to care for the specific needs of their child(ren), and must be free to seek God's wisdom and to choose who they will partner with in making these vital decisions. Those dedicated to following Christ will not choose to partner with an agent whose value for life and moral compass is so utterly skewed that they openly promote the killing of unborn babies. Governmental health direction is a dangerously subtle but immeasurably devastating injustice that serves to minimize the role of parents and divert our trust in the true God, directing it instead to the idol of medicine.

In light of these truths, I urge you to consider how the church will respond to governmental policies of mandatory medical interventions and surveillance. If we intend to value people as Jesus did, treating them with dignity and immeasurable worth, we must promote true informed consent for medical procedures, affirming each individual's freedom to decline medical interventions for themselves and their children without discrimination. Standing on the Biblical foundation of justice and freedom, I recommend that we prepare to welcome and shepherd those, now and in the future, who conscientiously object to governmental policies that undermine God's commands and our freedom to obey them. This includes compulsory vaccination and surveillance.

I am providing a list of credible resources to equip you in developing a comprehensive understanding of these issues. I would be honored to be of further service to you and the church as you explore this multi-faceted topic.
